Happy the Man Who Feareth God

BASED ON PSALM 128, “Happy the Man Who Feareth God” (Wohl dem der in Gottes Furcht steht) is one of Luther’s metrical psalm settings of 1524, which also include such texts as “From Depths of Woe I Cry to Thee” and “O Lord, Look Down from Heaven, Behold.” Unlike the sober and austere quality of the other hymns, however, “Happy the Man Who Feareth God,” like the Psalm on which it is based, expresses an exuberant spirit of rejoicing in the good gifts of God. The text first appeared in print in the Erfurt Enchiridion, and from there entered into virtually all the Lutheran hymn-books.

The Erfurt Enchiridion assigned the tune “Jesus Christus, unser Heiland” (the earlier tune, not to be confused with the later tune that goes by that name in modern hymnals), which, however, did not fit well with the tone of the hymn. Johann Walter provided a more fitting tune later the same year in his Geystliche gesangk Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524, No. 26, but the tune was difficult and would be replaced in Joseph Klug’s Geistliche Lieder auff’s new gebessert, Wittenberg, 1533, with the tune now known as “Wo Gott zum Haus,” which would come to be the standard tune for this text. The setting here provided is slightly altered from that by Johann Hermann Schein, 1627.

The translation is by Richard Massie, Martin Luther’s Spiritual Songs, London, 1854. It was included in the Evangelical Lutheran Hymn-Book, but is not found in The Lutheran Hymnal or the Lutheran Service Book. The text and music here provided may be freely used and reproduced for any purpose whatever, and are offered with the prayer that they may serve for the edification of Christian people everywhere.
